Peter Learns Many Things.

Hardly had Peter Rabbit left White ered some new tracks in the snow, and "Now whose can these be. I wonder?"

hought he They were quite different from the tiny tracks of Whitefoot. In the first place they were ever so much larger Then, too, they were quite far apart in little groups of four, two little round ones and two quite long ones.
"Of course," said Peter to himself,
"the little ones are the prints of front feet and the long ones are the prints of hind feet. They are just a little like my own prints, only not so big. I guess I'll follow them and see where

So Peter started off lipperty-lipperty lip, for these tracks were very easy to follow. He had followed them quite a distance without discovering anybody when he happened to look back at his own tracks. Then he stopped abruptly and sat up. First he looked at his own tracks and then he looked at the other tracks, and a very foolish look crept over his face. He had noticed what he had quite forgotten, and this was that in hopping he puts his hind feet down in front of his fore feet so that any one who didn't know that would think from his tracks that he was going in just the opposite direction from what he was. He looked a little closer at the tracks he had been following and now he could see the marks of toenalls. Whoever had made those trarks did just as he did, put the hind feet down in front of the fore feet, and here he had been following them in the wrong direction. No wonder he didn't catch up with any one. My, how foolish Peter did feel! He looked this way and that way to make sure that no one had seen what he had been doing, and then he turned about and started back the way he had come as fast as he could go.

When he reached the place where he way he had come as fast as he could go.

When he reached the place where he had first begun to follow the tracks he kept right on. Presently he came to a place where some one had dug down through the snow. Right beside the little hole was an empty nutshell. Peter stopped and right away he lost all interest. "Pooh!" he exclaimed. "I'm not going to waste my time following those tracks any farther. They were made by Happy Jack Squirrel, and he's at home in bed now. Funny I didn't think of him before. Next time I see his tracks I'll know them, so persented.

I didn't think of him before. Next time I see his tracks I'll know them, so perhaps my time hasn't been wholly wasted."

With this Peter once more went looking for tracks, and he didn't have far to look. This tme they were big round tracks in a single row. Peter took one good, look at them and that was tracks in a single row. Peter took one good look at them and that was enough.

"Reddy Fox." he exclaimed under his breath. "This is no place for me if he is about. There is one good thing, and that is they head away from where I have been. I hope he won't take it into his head to come even this way. Established 1840.

Moulmein.

The "old Moulmein pageda" stands on a height in the center of the sleepy Burmese city, its golden dome, ringed with little tinkling bells, glistening in the eastern sun. Moulmein is the heart of lower Burma and the great pagoda is the heart of Moulmein. Its quiet priests, its benevolent, inscrutable Buddhas, its reverent, good-natured worshipers are Burma itself.

Reform either makes the world a little better or else more uncomfortable—or both.

Lies are popular because plenty of people would rather believe them than the truth.

Girls shouldn't throw kisses; it's almost impossible for a girl to hit thing she aims at.

The average man is miserable betause he spends a lot of his time in making himself think he is.

Marrying a man to reform him is like making a good omojet out of a badegg. Maybe it can be done.

It takes a wise man who doesn't let his wife know the size of his income.
